Q: Linking to CSS in React I'm new to react and have been using the following style for icons: I would like to add more styles to it, but it doesn't work like this: I have looked at the docs for react, and it mentions that you can import the files inside the tag of the document. Is that how it's supposed to be done? Shouldn't React provide a way to import just the class name, or is that not possible? A: You can import both classes separately like this: Also you can get the full list of available classes here: Yes, you are correct: you can import both as required, and the css file will be loaded. The problem you're facing is that you have two tags instead of one, which means two sets of styles. Because of this you are not using the styles inside the elements properly, as they are overwritten with the last set of styles you 82157476af
